What the health experts say.

AUSTRALIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION (AMA)

Frequent consumption of sugary drinks can cause tooth decay and excess weight, increasing the risk of serious diseases such as type 2 diabetes, heart disease, stroke, and 13 types of cancer.

DR. ANGIE NILSSON, AUSTRALIAN DENTAL ASSOCIATION

Just one 600mL bottle of soft drink can pack a shocking 16 teaspoons of sugar. Frequently gulping down sugary drinks can increase the risk of tooth decay, sensitivity, and erosion.

HEART FOUNDATION

Healthier diets are key to reducing the risk of heart disease, Australia's number one killer. Sugary drinks are currently the biggest source of sugar in our diets.

RACHEL K. JOHNSON, PROFESSOR OF NUTRITION AND PEDIATRICS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT:

The typical child consumes about triple the recommended amount of added sugars, half from food and half from drinks. Limiting added sugars early helps set healthier habits for life.
